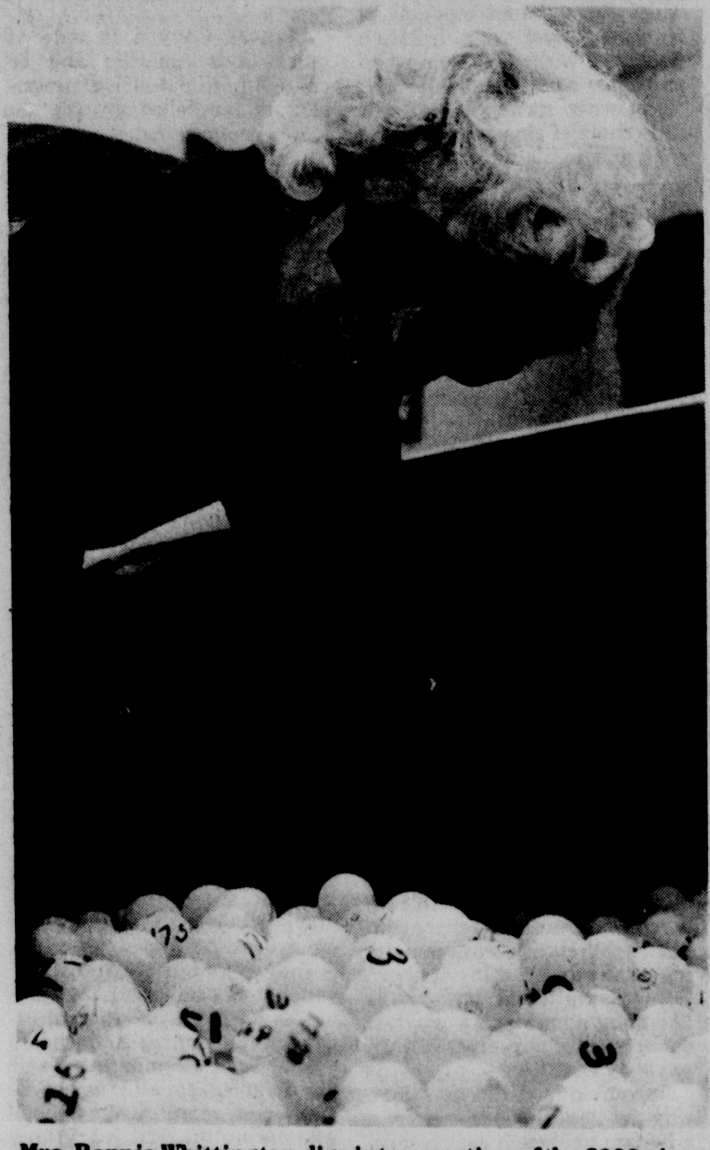
Construction blasts all records



Mrs. Bonnie Whittington digs into a portion of the 3000 ping-pong balls which dropped from the skies over Canyon Saturday morning in a merchants' give-away program set to coincide with the annual West Texas State University homecoming parade. Winning number balls were scattered among the 3000 orbs to be taken to local merchants for prizes.

Home and commercial building blitzed all existing records in Canyon during October.

With October building permits, construction in the city this year has soared to new heights in every area — total dollar amount, total number of housing starts, and total number of construction permits issued.

Figures compiled last week by Code Enforcement Officer Jerry Lehnick indicate:

*Building permits issued through the 10 months ending today total $6,952,990. The old record, set in 1975 here, was $6,618,004.

*A total of 202 building permits have been issued during the 10-month period. Last year, which established the record, saw 176 building permits issued.

*Building permits have been issued so far for 136 homes. Last year's record total for a 12-month period was 109 homes.

Lehnick said permits have been issued for more than $5 million in new home construction in Canyon.

That figure itself would surpass the building permit total for 1975 if the $2.5 million permit issued for construction of the new West Texas State University fine arts building is deducted.

Lehnick said the nearly $7 million in permits this year have been for taxable property. No state, city or county construction is included and only about $65,000 is due to new construction for Canyon High School tennis courts.

Even with the large number of housing starts in Canyon during the first 10 months of the year, Lehnick said he has been told by builders and developers that there are still not many houses for sale in the city.

"They're having no problems selling them," he said.

Lehnick's figures indicate the 100th building permit was issued for construction of a new home during August. In 1975's record year, the 100th new home permit was issued during October.

He said the approach of winter weather will probably slow the start of new housing, though, and he does not expect the new home total to hit the 200 mark.

The figures indicate the permit price for a new home in Canyon is averaging about $38,000.

Most of the new homes have been spread in several areas of the city — in the Westgate Addition which is west of Canyon High School, in the Hunsley Hills Addition in the north part of the city, and in the Hidden Valley and Pioneer Estates areas.

If an average of three persons occupy each new home in the city, Canyon's population could jump by more than 400 during this year.

Nine new residences were under construction during October, according to Lehnick's figures and permits totalled $433,230 for all permits issued.

During September, the total for all permits was just over $1 million with 11 new residences under construction. Nineteen new residences went under construction during August.

Regent hints at athletic shake-up

A West Texas State University regent said Thursday he "would not be a bit surprised" if there are major changes in the leadership of the university's athletic department "in the near future."

Regent Don Curry of Fort Worth told The News there has been "considerable dissatisfaction" among regents with the operation of the athletic department.

"It would be no surprise to me if we have a major change in the near future," Curry said.

Curry confirmed that the regents, in discussions conducted during executive sessions during which press and spectators are ommitted, have discussed "the replacement of the entire coaching staffs of both football and basketball."

Apparently Athletic Director Gene Mayfield, who is also head coach of the football team, is no longer as sure of his position and tenure, either.

Mayfield told The News last week that even with a new five-year contract he's unsure of the future.

Mayfield said he has "every intention" of staying with the Buffalo program.

"Who knows what the future may bring," he said. "I sure don't know."

Curry's comments came Thursday in response to a News query about an informant's report that Mayfield will be replaced at the close of the current football season.

The head coach has been criticized in the media and in private for the record of his Buffaloes this year.

Curry agreed that the university owes "certain moral commitments to the staff" in the athletic department.

Mayfield was given a five-year contract last year by regents before Board Chairman Cloyce K. Box of Dallas left the board after serving his tenure.

His current nine-month salary totals $23,670, but another three month's salary comes out of faculty funds under the university's department of health, recreation and physical education.

Regents just this fall ratified a new contract with Head Basketball Coach Ron Ekker, whose team made a strong showing last season.

Ekker's salary under the contract jumped more than $3,000 over last year. He is budgeted $18,900 for nine months while another three months' salary comes from the faculty funds under the physical education department.

Mayfield has been the center of controversy almost since the day he came to the campus to replace a fired Joe Kerbel.

His operation of the athletic department has been both praised and criticized and the storm has drawn in other university officials, including Dr. Lloyd I. Watkins, president.

The criticism, which has reached a peak during mid-season this fall, has had no great effect on the Buffalo squad, Mayfield told The News.

"I don't think we have any morale problems," he said.

But, Mayfield admits the Buffaloes do have problems of team quality.

"I'm reminded of a story," Mayfield said. "Sonny Jergunsen was talking one day to a defensive tackle and he said 'Why don't you sack the quarterback like Dallas does?' The tackle said 'Did it ever occur to you that we're not as good as those guys?' "

The coaching staff, he said, recognized as this season began that the team would have problems with experience and size.

"All of us want us to be better than we are," he said.

Mayfield said the Buffaloes are on a par with several teams played this season.

"Unfortunately, we lost two or three we could have won," he said. "But Houston and North Texas were just better than we are."

Nevertheless, Mayfield is philosophical about his controversial position.

He feels criticism is a problem inherent in the coaching business.

"People like to see the team win and when we don't, then they're not concerned about a recruiting problem or funding problem," he said.

Hightower spending over Price's, but lists incomplete

Incumbent Congressman Jack Hightower has received and spent in his bid for re-election more than twice the amount received and spent by his opponent, according to candidates' statements filed in Austin.

Democratic Challenger Bob Burks is also outspending Incumbent Randall County Tax Collector Mrs. Audrey Bruse, similar figures filed in Canyon show.

The campaign contribution and expenditure statements filed by candidates in contested races cover their election campaigns through Oct. 21, so do not include the usual last-minute blitz of campaigning and advertising which comes just prior to the elections.

Statements filed by the Hightower for Congress Committee with the Secretary of State's office in Austin indicate the congressman has received contributions of $80,841 and has spent $79,003.

The Bob Price for Congress Committee No. 2 has received contributions of $33,541 and has had expenditures totalling $33,958. No other support is listed.

The Price statement also shows a $40,000 loan from Panhandle Bank and Trust of Borger, of which $30,000 has been repaid.

The Price statement indicates the bulk of his contributors so far have been private citizens donating not more than $100.

Hightower's statement, however, indicates he has received nearly $10,000 for his campaign

Superintendent vows opposition to removals of land in future

Canyon's new schools superintendent told county school board members in a strongly worded statement Thursday he will oppose any future efforts to de-annex lands from the Canyon school district.

"If any more (petitions) come up in Canyon there'll be a lot of groundwork done to convince our board not to let any more property go," Dr. Sam Thompson told the county board. "I'm just speaking for me, but I feel strongly about that. I'm telling you now that in the future I will work real hard to convince the board to not let any land go."

Thompson's revelation came Thursday morning after county board members split 3-2 on a vote to allow the de-annexation of a half-section of land just north of Estacado Estates in the north part of the Canyon school district.

Earlier in their meeting, the board voted unanimously to allow de-annexation of a full section known as the Sleepy Hollow subdivision near Puckett Place West and west of Estacado Estates.

Thursday's battle centered on a request by several owners of the half-section north of Estacado Estates, a developed subdivision with more than 100 families, to have their property de-annexed from the Canyon district and annexed by the Amarillo district.

While county board members had no discussion on the Sleepy Hollow de-annexation request, they balked at the de-annexation petition for the half-section, apparently because of its proximity to Estacado Estates.

More than 20 persons listened to the discussion, with several from Estacado Estates both for and against the de-annexation.

Thompson, who came to Canyon at mid-summer to replace Supt. Jerry Jacobs, remained almost neutral on the issue of de-annexation a month ago when the Canyon School Board approved the petition requesting de-annexation of the half-section, known locally as the Barfield land.

The board passed the petition on a split 4-3 vote.

Thompson had also produced a report indicating it was neither financially advantageous or disadvantageous to the Canyon district to allow future de-annexations.

During the Thursday session, he indicated he will also favor adoption by the Canyon School Board of guidelines which specifically lay out northern boundaries of the district for future de-annexation efforts. An informal set of guidelines drawn up last spring by Jacobs, Board Pres. Tom Keeling and two Amarillo school officials placed the north-

Thompson to hear bad news Monday

Canyon school district taxpayers will get the bad news about their taxes Monday in Austin and the school board will meet Tuesday to decide what to do about it.

Supt. Sam Thompson heads for Austin Monday morning to attend a session called by the state for the review of figures compiled in a state-wide, district-by-district study of tax valuations.

While Thompson doesn't know what the figures will reveal about Canyon School District, he fears they will show this district's valuations are far below fair market value.

If the Canyon values are low, it is anticipated the district may have to come up with more locally-raised funds to finance the public school program.

That's because the legislature seems inclined to base state financial support of schools on several factors, including the local district's ability to pay for

Time back for today

If things feel out of kilter this morning, it may be because you forgot to turn your clock back an hour at 2 a.m.

Today's the day the nation will have a bit more light upon arising and darkness will come earlier.

Presidential race tops Tuesday ballot for voters

Randall County voters are expected to buck an anticipated national trend of voter apathy when they turn out Tuesday to cast ballots in a general election which has them voting for President and a variety of state, district and local officers.

Based on past election figures, Randall County Clerk LeRoy Hutton is gearing for a record turn-out of voters at the county's 23 precinct polling places.

Voting booths, featuring punch-card ballots, open at 7 a.m. Tuesday and close at 7 p.m.

Ballots will be counted following the closing of the polling places at the West Texas State University computer center.

Hutton has laid in 34,000 punch-card ballots, more than enough for each of the 33,274 registered voters in the county to have one.

He has also provided an ample supply of write-in ballots, anticipating what may be a heavy write-in campaign in a race for the state Supreme Court. Along with the write-in ballots, he will also have 10,000 copies of instructions on how to cast write-in votes distributed to the various polling places.

If local voters are consistent with their record in the past, more than 80 per cent of them will go to the polls on Tuesday. In the 1956 general election nearly 100 per cent of those registered cast ballots. The percentage has steadily declined since that time, though, as the number of registered voters has more than quadrupled.

In the 1972 general election, only 82.6 per cent of those registered cast ballots.

Local, state and district races have attracted little voter interest during the past year, even with several races contested.

At the county level, only one office is contested — that of the county tax assessor-collector.

Republican Incumbent Mrs. Audrey Bruse is seeking election to her third term in office while fending off the challenges of Democrat Bob Burks, an Amarillo real estate dealer.

Burks has charged Mrs. Bruse operates her office inefficiently, but Mrs. Bruse has defended her record, citing computerization of the tax roll and a general holding down of expenses.

Mrs. Bruse has also charged that Burks is responsible for several outstanding delinquent tax judgments, a fact which Burks admits but says resulted from a bad business investment and which are being paid off on a monthly basis. Burks, on the other hand, has charged Mrs. Bruse with using her tax office employees to dig into his background. Mrs. Bruse has denied the charge.

At the county level, Dist. Atty. Randall Sherrod is unopposed on the ballot as are Sheriff Cliff Longest and County Commissioner Jim Fletcher.

Canyon Farmer Bob Henry, who won the Democratic nomination as commissioner of the Canyon area precinct by beating Jim Christopher, is unopposed on the ballot. So is O. G. Minden, who beat Farrell Randell in the Democratic primary, for a spot on the ballot as constable of Precinct 4.

At the district level, Dist. Judge George Dowlen, appointed two years ago by Gov. Dolph Briscoe, is unopposed in his first bid for election.

Charles Reynolds is unopposed as he seeks re-election to the 7th District Court of Civil Appeals.

Democrat Incumbent Bob Simpson and Republican Nominee Robert G. Holt square off against each other on the ballot in the race for state representative of District 65. Simpson has served two years in the legislature. He is an Amarillo attorney.

Holt, an Amarillo investor, was an unsuccessful candidate several years ago in the state treasurer's race.

State Senator Max Sherman seeks re-election unopposed on the

How to vote by write-in

How to vote for a write-in candidate:

* To vote for a person not on the ballot, write in both the title of the office and the candidate's name in the space inside a write-in envelope which will be provided upon request by voting officials at your precinct.
* Remove the stub from the punch-card ballot and sign the stub.
* Insert the voted punch-card ballot inside the write-in envelope and under the flap so that the two will remain together.
* Drop the signed stub in the stub box. Drop the punch-card ballot and the write-in envelope in the ballot box. The punch-card should be inside the write-in envelope.

'Playboy' cancels kids' votes

Jimmy Carter's Playboy interview may have cost him the Canyon fourth, fifth and sixth grade vote.

That was the indication Thursday after Rex Reeves Elementary School teachers counted the votes from their fourth, fifth and sixth grade classes.

But, if the straw votes taken on the upcoming Presidential election are any indication of the way Tuesday's official balloting will go, both major candidates will go to the wire for a photo finish.

Rex Reeves Elementary School's fourth, fifth and sixth grade classes this week held a "straw vote" with the results showing Jimmy Carter with 49 per cent of the vote while Gerald Ford picked up 51 per cent. The students conducted the election to see if their feelings reflect the way the county votes on Tuesday.

In the Nixon-McGovern election of 1972, a student straw vote reflected the voting attitudes in the general election.

Fourth grade students voted 78 for Carter and 72 for Ford, while fifth graders gave Ford 60 votes to Carter's 46 votes. Sixth grade students cast 82 votes for Carter with 93 votes being tallied for Ford. Two sections of the special education classes split their vote 16 for Carter to Ford's 7.

In the overall count at the school Jimmy Carter received 222 votes while Gerald Ford's vote was tallied at 232.

Although several students reported that their vote was determined from listening to parent's talk, several reported they were influenced by the television debates.

More than one student reported they cast their vote of confidence in Ford's favor as a result of Carter's review in Playboy.

Several students also stated they were giving their vote to Carter "because they want a new president."

Editorials

We support Jack Hightower

The Canyon News endorses Congressman Jack Hightower in his bid for re-election as the representative of the 13th District.

Hightower, a premier state senator for many years in Austin, has proven himself an able, conscientious, and district-conscious legislator during his two years in Washington.

Reflective of this area, Hightower has carried a conservative fiscal and social philosophy to Washington and, the record shows, has voted on issues commensurate with that philosophy.

He has also become an effective spokesman for the agricultural interests of the area, supporting and introducing legislation to aid the cattleman and the farmer. He supported long before action was taken by the White House a higher wheat loan price.

To a maximum extent, Hightower has examined the assumptions of those hè represents and has willingly and candidly announced his intentions to follow not the platform of his party but the will of those he represents.

Where his constituents' problems and beliefs have conflicted with the call of party and party leadership, Hightower has shown through his actions that he will not put party above his responsibility to those he has been elected to serve.

In addition, Hightower has apparently run efficient Washington and local district offices. He answers his mail. He has a listed telephone number. He is accessible.

During breaks in Congress, Hightower has returned to the district to stay abreast of the issues here and the people's responses to those issues. He has chosen not to participate in junkets to foreign nations ostensibly for the purpose of gathering information.

Likewise, he has chosen to use his first term in office, a brief two-year span, to learn the complexities of politics at the nation's highest level so that learning may be put to use later in dealing with the district's problems. His constituents have learned he will listen to them.

Hightower, then, has proven himself accessible, consistent, in tune with his district, and effective.

A vote for Hightower on Tuesday will assure that the voice of the 13th District in Washington reflects the concerns, the beliefs and the desires of the people of the 13th District. — C. W.

But no one for President

The lack of a Canyon News endorsement of either Presidential nominee this week is less a reflection of indecision or conflict on the part of the publishers than a comment on the candidates themselves and, possibly, the times in which we live.

It will be with a great deal of caution and no little trepidation that we cast our ballots on Tuesday.

The four years since last we voted have had, we admit, a tremendous impact on our willingness to endorse candidates since endorsements necessarily imply a certain whole-heartedness, an attitude we simply can't muster in the current Presidential race.

This lack of commitment, and we admit that's what it is, is probably indicative of our general skepticism of both candidates.

We cannot in good conscience recommend one to you over the other.

The things that worry us, and give rise to what might be labelled a cop-out, are the very things we consider essential to good government and to acceptable leadership. To state them briefly, we are concerned about the real, not perceived, integrity and honesty of the candidates.

While we do not demand absolute purity and perfect high-mindedness of Presidential candidates or Presidents, we believe in the wake of Watergate the standards upon which a free and civilized people depend for survival cannot be spoken of or upheld only cosmetically.

Below the superficiality of words spoken before millions on television, under the media hype which is more and more characteristic of campaigns for the White House, we look for consistency in behavior and in thought. We look for behavior which is not only consistent with the highest values of our country but for behavior which is internally consistent.

We question then, President Ford, who in one gesture of high-mindedness grants pardon to his predecessor but fails to see that consistency demands a similar grant for those who discovered the truth of the Vietnam War for themselves long before the country as a whole experienced the revelation.

We question the abilities of President Ford, who allows his foreign policy arm to flail the air in secret, while professing to cherish an open White House.

We question the innate wisdom of a President who has found it politically inexpedient to formulate a forceful federal energy policy in the wake of mounting evidence that such a policy could forestall an energy crisis of monumental proportions in the near future.

Likewise, we question the practical motivation of Jimmy Carter, who denies in one breath that he wishes to wrap himself in saintly garb, but who incessantly refers to his saintliness.

We question the wisdom of a candidate who seemingly foresees a tenure based on morality yet fails to illustrate his knowledge that a moral imperative in foreign policy, for example, may preclude as well as include intervention in other countries' affairs.

Saddest of all, we question ourselves. We look hopelessly through the fog of campaign rhetoric for a glimmer of the truth. Perhaps we've seen it. Perhaps we'll never see it. The structure of today's Presidential campaign appears to us, however, to obfuscate it.

We're saying, we suppose, we've somewhere in the last four years lost the ability to give ourselves wholeheartedly and without reservation to a shimmering cause, not because we fear error but because we fear our active participation may in some way compound the error and influence the error of others.

If the truth eludes us, can we pretend editorially to recommend it to others?

We can only repeat: We will vote on Tuesday, but with caution and no little trepidation. — C. W.

'Affirmative action' needed

The federal bureaucracy which created "affirmative action" needs a little affirmative action itself.

A boot in the posterior which could provide a little action in the infamous Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has come in the form of a General Accounting Office (GAO) report which says the commission has had only a "minimal effect" on the problems of job discrimination facing women and members of minority groups.

The EEOC has, since its inception in 1974, been long on cheap talk, extra long on restrictive regulations, and far short on real action, says the GAO.

Probably more than any other arm of government, the EEOC illustrates that for every action there is an opposite reaction.

The EEOC through high-handed regulation has worked to actually institutionalize hiring and firing practices which result in discrimination. Initial reluctance on the part of some employers has turned to a grudging compliance at minimal levels and to outright obstinate disobedience, primarily because of the ridiculous mandates of the EEOC, mandates which in many cases have resulted in reverse-discrimination.

While muddying the employment waters from the management end, the EEOC has also proven itself unable and/or unwilling to deal with the legitimate discrimination complaints of citizens.

The case of Marguerite Strain of Canyon, who has contended for three years that the Texas Municipal Retirement System discriminates against her because she is a woman, is typical, the GAO report indicates.

Mrs. Strain has given up dealing with the EEOC confusion and refusal to budge and will apparently take her own case into court.

The GAO reports the commission has a backlog of 120,000 cases, cases which, if the current pattern holds true, won't be satisfactorily solved.

If the EEOC is effective with neither offender nor offendee, how long must it be allowed to exist before we can expect some "affirmative action?" — C. W.

A letter from Pres. Ford

Perhaps President Ford is trying to tell Randall County Commissioner Jim Fletcher something.

Fletcher, who farms and is involved in the fertilizer business, received a campaign letter last week from the White House.

A Democrat, Fletcher was only amused when he opened the letter to learn of Ford's agriculture policies and read the introduction.

"Dear Mr. Fertilizer," began the letter.

No, it wasn't signed by Earl Butz. — C. W.

Letters to the editor

Reader backs Brown column

Dear Editor,

I thank God that in America, people are allowed to have their own opinions and to express them in speaking or writing. However, a letter to you from Mrs. Madewell in which she expressed her opinion of Mrs. Ann Brown last week seemed to me to express opinions that were not based on factual information.

Mrs. Madewell evidently does not know Ann Brown very well. I know her well, and her life and work does not demonstrate that she is "self-satisfied and self-righteous" as the writer judged her to be. She is a lover and counselor of youth and adults who are in need. She is a good citizen who is fundamental in her beliefs and in her political alignments. She is old-fashioned to many modern ways of thinking, because she believes the Bible, and she believes that people and governmental units should live within their means. I think Ann believes that Christianity is the basis of happiness, and so do many other Christians, who know they have been spiritually born again. Mrs. Brown has counseled with women who have experienced some of the disappointments in life such as divorce, unfaithful husbands, and problems of bringing up children and making a living without a helpmeet. She is familiar with the problems of some of these children of broken homes who have suffered emotionally and otherwise because of the insecurity and loneliness, and lack of love, and care of a father or mother due to the breaking up of the home. Although Mrs. Brown is a professional woman herself, she believes that the most honorable profession of a woman is to be a good wife and mother.

In regard to the status of men and women, evidently they are about physically and mentally equal in possible achievements, except this one greatest achievement, motherhood. Since men are total failures in this function, women are not only superior, they are unique. I believe this is true from birth to adulthood.

Thank God for Ann Brown, a good and valuable citizen, talented writer, Bible scholar, and lover and counselor of youth — a supporter of those things which are permanently good for the life of a person, local community and Nation.

Our commitment demands action

By CARROLL WILSON

No community in the Texas Panhandle, and perhaps no community between Texline and Dallas, has a brighter future than does Canyon.

City officials reported last week that well over 100 houses have gone under construction during the past 10 months. Construction records set in 1975 are being smothered by new records.

New homes and new families have added new businesses and new volume to businesses which have been here awhile.

We are becoming what community leaders for decades have wanted us to become.

That we are growing, booming is a testimony to the grit and willingness to gamble of a good many merchants, businessmen and developers, and it's also a testimony which proves to an extent the old saw that out of conflict arises a better idea.

Take Arch Hunsley, for example. Cussed and largely unappreciated during his prime, Hunsley was a visionary, a man beset by an idea.

He fought angrily and often with city government here to see Hunsley Hills, his dream, develop as he knew it could.

Hunsley died without seeing his dream fully developed, and the conflict goes on between Developer A. W. Lair and the city and others.

The conflict is interesting, to be sure, and often we tend to see the history of our community as written in pages of the newspaper as one of conflict.

But a bit of perspective allows us to see that developers like Hunsley and Lair, Aubrey Crossland, the Taylors, the Garretts and others have, even with the conflict, meant vitality and growth to Canyon.

Developers take tremendous risks.

They gamble thousands that their vision of the future will mesh with the wants and desires of newly married couples or established families.

That Canyon's developers have taken that kind of gamble when the national economy is tenuous at best, when inflation fluctuates without reason, when unemployment plagues major cities, when money is costly, is little short of amazing.

Their gamble and their risks have paid off for Canyon in hundreds of new residents, new businesses, and new money.

But, in reality, the gamble has not been their's alone.

Behind the developers stand Canyon's banks, both public-spirited, which have also shown the kind of willingness to challenge the future which will assure that Canyon's future is one of continued growth.

The risks for banks and developers in Canyon are probably even more subject to pitfalls than in other more isolated communities.

Because Canyon is only 15 miles from Amarillo and because Amarillo itself is experiencing unparallelled growth, the risk is compounded.

But, Canyon, too, has a great deal going for it that other communities simply don't have.

We have one of the best school systems in the state. We have a state university. We have a large middle class, which is well educated.

An active chamber of commerce has taken up the challenge to broaden Canyon's economic base, which has for years been dependent not only on the university but on the area's agriculture.

The possibility for new industry near the city's boarders enhances our future.

All of which, I think, indicates that Canyon, whether it realizes it or not, has made a tacit commitment to expand, to grow, to meet the future head-on.

That commitment has come only in the last three or four years but it's there.

The commitment now demands full recognition. And with full recognition, I hope will come the kind of cooperative spirit which will bring together a variety of factors, both economic and psychological, to assure that our growth continues.

The commitment is one to Canyon, not as a suburb of Amarillo, but as a unique and special organism functioning as a whole.

That such a commitment will pay dividends for all of us has already been manifested by those who during the past years have chosen to gamble their futures on Canyon.

Because of their risks, the stakes are not so high for the rest of us.

Without a commitment from all of Canyon's residents, though, the risk of starting a business, of expanding a store, of funding a development could easily outweigh the advantages.

Growth is dependent on the commitment of developers and bankers, certainly, but it is equally dependent on the commitment of a town's citizens to their community.

When the housewife travels to Amarillo for groceries, when she buys her shoes and her dresses and her children's school supplies and clothes from Amarillo merchants, she makes her commitment to Amarillo not to Canyon.

She takes from Canyon the key ingredient for growth — money.

When the businessman who works in Amarillo, stops there to buy his new automobile, or his new suit, or the supplies for fixing up his home, he, too, casts his lot with Amarillo.

A commitment of mind, to mean anything, must be manifested by more than words.

Our world

A plan for our survival

By ANN BROWN

Open Letters have always been a popular means of communication. The following was written from Cicero to Rome in 54 B.C. It may have been published first on the walls of the Coliseum.

The letter has been republished many times in areas where its message was current. Was it ever more applicable than here and now?

"We are taxed in our bread and in our wine, on our incomes and our investments, on our land and on our property not only for base creatures who don't deserve the name of men, but for foreign nations, complaisant nations who will bow to us and accept our largesse and promise us to assist in the keeping of peace — these mendicant nations who will destroy us when we show a moment of weakness or our treasury is bare, and surely it is becoming bare! We are taxed to maintain legions on their soil, in the name of law and order and the Pax Romana, a document which will fall into dust when it pleases our allies and our vassals. We keep them in precarious balance only with our gold. Is the heartblood of our nation worth these? Were they bound to us with ties of love they would not ask our gold. They take our very flesh, and they hate and despise us. And who shall say we are worthy of more? . . . When a government becomes powerful it is destructive, extravagant and violent; it is a usurer which takes bread from innocent mouths and deprives honorable men of their substance, for votes with which to perpetuate itself."

How could a nation wise enough to make laws still in the best legal tradition after more than 2000 years, and build roads in use today have been so foolish as not to realize they were committing suicide? And this letter is proof they were warned.

How can our great nation fail to see that we are traveling the same road to the same end?

Warnings of the dangers of our current political policies have been sounded loud and clear for at least a generation from all the conservative newspapers, pulpits, and history books.

And thousands of individuals have made an avocation of pointing out that a return to sound government is imperative to survival.

With all the conflicting claims, however, how can one be sure what is sound government?

The history books paint a rather objective picture of the nations that have fallen, and the reasons are usually quite obvious.

It is by no means definitive, but the most concise history book is the Bible. It also gives a perfect plan for national survival. The recipe is found in II Chron. 7:14.

With so many obvious signs pointing in the right direction, how do so many nations get on the wrong road?

Could the answer be that nations are made up of individuals. Isn't it possible to perceive the faults of others with reasonable clarity, while remaining relatively blind to our own?

Correcting faults, however, is like tying a necktie; we can do it easier on ourselves than anybody else.

As individual Americans then, why not heed this message from a Roman tomb, and each resolve to do our best to be a part of the solution and not the problem?

This strange language

By LAURIE TELFAIR

What a saucy Texas miss can do to an innocent vowel sound like 'ou' is enough to make Henry Higgins weep.

If the personal pronoun 'you' was meant to be pronounced 'yew', it would be spelled 'yew.'

Of course, that's not much of a problem anymore. I can speak Texan now and can converse with the natives without much difficulty. Except on the telephone.

Having to learn Texan when we moved here last year was all part of the cultural shock of moving from the east coast to the Panhandle. I really hadn't figured on having to learn a new language.

That I would have to do was quickly apparent when I began work at The News. When I thought I was talking to Susie Wyatt, for example, it turned out she was Susie White. The uncommon surname Necks was actually the more common Nix. And so on.

Moving around the country adds considerably to one's vocabulary. It is interesting to find the differences in terms and accents.

For example, 'kiddos' is a big word here. I've never heard it used anywhere else.

An expression my mother uses is 'blackberry winter.' Do you have blackberry winter here? If not, it's the last cold spell of the spring, somewhere around Easter, if Easter is late, when the blackberry bushes are in bloom.

Now in parts of North Carolina, if you want to communicate either by phone or in person with another person, you announce your intentions thusly: I want to get up with Harry.

This expression, however, is somewhat startling to the newcomer. Actually, North Carolina has a number of regionalisms that were captured rather well in the old Gomer Pyle television show.

The Midwest didn't seem to have very many quirks of speech, but they made up for it in obnoxious accents.

Friends and family in my childhood used to fight heatedly with a family from Michigan who insisted on pronouncing creek as crick and pants' leg as pant leg.

And soft drinks go by many other names. In Omaha and Michigan, it is pop. In North Carolina, it's soda. And, nearly everywhere, all brands of cola are called by a common trade name. This trade name is so often misused in fact that the corporation spends some money and energy insisting that their brand name be used for their drink only.

But, back to the Texas language. How about you Texans, natives or naturalized citizens, trot out your favorite expressions for me. I'm fascinated.

I have never approached a national election feeling quite so blah.

I fear Henry Kissinger as secretary of state but I think I fear Jimmy Carter's concept of government even more. If Mr. Carter carries out even half the programs he has advocated, I see only rampant inflation ahead for this country.

I know the polls still place Carter ahead but I have a gut feeling that the voters are going to pick Ford when they get into the voting places across the country this week.

I think the campaign has matured Ford some. Anyway, he seems to me to comport himself more like a President in the past few weeks than previously.

• • •

Never before have I faced the polls without knowing exactly what I would do in the voting booth. That's what I'm up against right now.

I'm leaning toward Ford and will probably vote for him simply because after tons of rhetoric I do not know what Jimmy Carter stands for. I cannot fathom what he would do if he's given the reins of government.

• • •

In Amarillo last week John Connally complained that if there is inflation, it is the Democrats fault. After all, he reasoned, they've been in the majority in congress for most of the past four decades.

Big John didn't take notice of the fact that he campaigned for many of the Democrats elected during the 1960s having served in the cabinet of Democrat John Kennedy.

Earl Butz was fired as secretary of agriculture for cracking a racist joke. No one would have thought of firing him if the joke had been about the French, Germans or British.

He should have been fired for stupidity. Anyone who doesn't know better than to say anything within earshot of John Dean is too dumb to hold a cabinet post.

Bob Burks critical of current tax office operations

A Democrat challenger, Bob Burks of Amarillo, will attempt to unseat incumbent Randall County Tax Collector Mrs. Audrey Bruse, a Republican, on Tuesday's general election ballot. In the following interviews, Burks and Mrs. Bruse express their opinions about issues facing Texas counties in the future and respond to various campaign charges about their own qualifications and effectiveness.

Democratic challenger Bob Burks, an Amarillo real estate dealer, charges that incumbent Mrs. Audrey Bruse runs an inefficient, over-staffed and high-expense tax collection office in Randall County.

The major thrust of his campaign for the office carried over last week in a special News interview with the candidate.

"When she took office it took $1 to collect $7 in taxes," Burks contends. "Today that's decreased to the point that it takes $1 to collect just $4 in taxes.

"She has the highest ratio of expenses to collections of any of the 26 tax offices in counties in the Panhandle."

Burks is also critical of the current county-wide property reappraisal, which is being conducted by Southwest Appraisal Co. of Austin, at a cost of about $240,000.

"This is a waste of the taxpayers' hard earned dollars," Burks said. 'It's a waste because it can be done in that office for considerably less amount — for somewhere around $100,000.

"We're already on a contract, but if I'm elected I'll never ever make the people be saddled with a quarter of a million dollar revaluation."

Burks said if he ran the tax office he would provide for year-round revaluations of portions of the county so that county tax records would be relatively up-to-date and constantly improving.

"To offset the rising expenses of her office, we had a 30 per cent tax increase this year," Burks said. "I will do my best to cut costs or expenditures of this office so we will not have any of these tax increases."

Burks said he feels he could operate the tax office more efficiently than has Mrs. Bruse, who is seeking her third term.

One way of creating efficiency, Burks said, would be to de-specialize the jobs performed by tax office employees.

He said Mrs. Bruse currently provides employees who specialize in different functions of the office, with each employee virtually unable to work competently outside that speciality.

"Everybody should be familiar with and have the know-how to do all the jobs," he said.

Burks also vows that if elected he will study other tax offices in comparable counties in the state to learn of their efficiencies and try to implement such efficiencies in the Randall County office.

"I'd also open the doors to the general public for suggestions," he said. "We've got a surplus of businessmen around here who would have ideas that might improve the tax office."

Burks calls for the office to be run like a business.

"I feel she has too many personnel," he said. With the use of a computer in the tax office — an innovation already implemented — Burks said personnel and related expenses should be cut.

The challenger said he would support any efforts to centralize tax offices to provide a single property appraisal for each jurisdiction in the county.

He noted that some South Amarillo residents pay taxes to as many as five jurisdictions and several of those jurisdictions have conflicting valuations placed on property.

A central assessing office would solve that problem, he said.

Burks said he would also favor a constant rotating revaluation effort by the county to keep valuations reasonably current.

Burks cited his personal experience in real estate as one asset in dealing with the tax office.

He noted that Mrs. Bruse had no experience in tax business before entering office in 1968.

"I have considerable experience in real estate in Potter and Randall counties and have been familiar with voter registration and automobile registration," he said.

Mrs. Bruse defends efficiency, office costs

Incumbent Tax Assessor-Collector Mrs. Audrey Bruse stresses the modernization efforts and efficiency of her office as key indicators of her suitability for re-election on Tuesday's election ballot.

Serving the final year of a second four-year term, Mrs. Bruse believes the office has made major strides in improving the county's tax collection system during her tenure in office.

She faces challenger Bob Burks, a Democrat, on the ballot in a race for the county office.

While Burks has challenged the efficiency of the county's tax office under Mrs. Bruse, the incumbent attributes those challenges to misinformation or distortion.

"All expenses in every office have increased since 1968," she said recently in a News interview. "They have increased from 27 per cent to 230 per cent. The tax office expenses have increased by 137 per cent.

"There will ba a variation there because different factors influence each office."

Mrs. Bruse said it is wrong to compare tax offices in different counties on the basis of the funds required to collect $1 in tax money.

She notes, for example, that on the Dumas tax roll, 54 per cent of the roll is provided by industries.

Currently, she said, Randall County's tax roll contains a total of 56,000 items while the Potter County roll has only 50,000 items.

"It doesn't cost us any more to put Bell Telephone Co. or Southwestern Public Service Co. on the rolls than it does to put your car on the rolls," she said, "and those companies may pay $25,000 in taxes while you pay less than $100."

Mrs. Bruse contends the correct way to compare a tax office's expenditures is by comparing the cost per account. Using that method, she said, the Randall County office puts items on the roll at a little lower cost than other area counties.

She believes she has made every effort to run her office efficiently.

"I've tried to give my very best to Randall County," she said. She said when initially elected eight years ago, she studied the statute books and related tax manuals to become completely familiar with the operations of the office.

Before taking office in 1968, she said, the tax office had 12 full-time employees, one part-time employee, and the equivalent of four full-time employees working only part-time.

"During the past year I had 18 full-time employees and the equivalent of four full-time employees on part-time plus there were two employees on the reappraisal when it was an extra project," she said.

Therefore, she said, "I don't feel anyone is justified in criticizing me."

Mrs. Bruse said commissioners probably made a wise decision in hiring an outside firm to provide a complete county revaluation of property.

The revaluation is to cost more than $240,000 under a contract between the county and Southwestern Appraisal Co. of Austin.

Mrs. Bruse said she inherited a problem with the tax rolls, a problem of lower-than-adequate tax values.

Two years ago, she said, commissioners instructed her to begin the reappraisal effort from her office without the aid of an outside firm.

But, she said, she soon checked with the tax assessor in Galveston and learned that with an in-house reappraisal , that county was paying more than $11 per tax parcel for the effort.

The outside firm has quoted a price of between $8 and $10 per parcel for the revaluation.

"With the shortage of qualified appraisers, it was utterly impossible to do it in one year like the commissioners wanted," she said.

And, Mrs. Bruse charged that her opponent, while critical of the outside revaluation now told appraisal representatives last summer he thought the outside approach was the best one for the county.

Mrs. Bruse said she has made significant strides in updating the tax office and its method of operations.

"When I came into office everything was done by hand. The tax roll was done on a Burroughs machine and it took 2 and a half months working a 12-hour shift to get it out," she said.

Through her efforts, she said, the county agreed to contract with the West Texas State University computer center to provide computerized tax services for the office.

In addition, she said she began immediately upon taking office to file tax information which hd not previously been filed.

She has instituted a system of sending second tax notices to taxpayers in the county just prior to the delinquency period, she said, to accomodate problems in mail service and to serve as a reminder.

Major efforts have also been made, Mrs. Bruse said, at collecting delinquent taxes and the county now employs, on a part-time basis, a prosecutor just to handle tax suits.

She also points to a new effort underway in the office to upgrade the maps available of county properties.

Mrs. Bruse said she would favor the concept of having one appraisal on all property within the county since the current system is found to be confusing by many taxpayers.

But, she said, she would not favor legislation which would establish a central state appraising office for the direction of values setting.

Mrs. Bruse notes that she has worked to obtain status as a Texas Certified Appraiser.

She also notes that she has maintained a Saturday morning schedule in her Amarillo office for the convenience of the public. The tax office has not been open in Canyon on Saturdays because of the lack of business, she said.

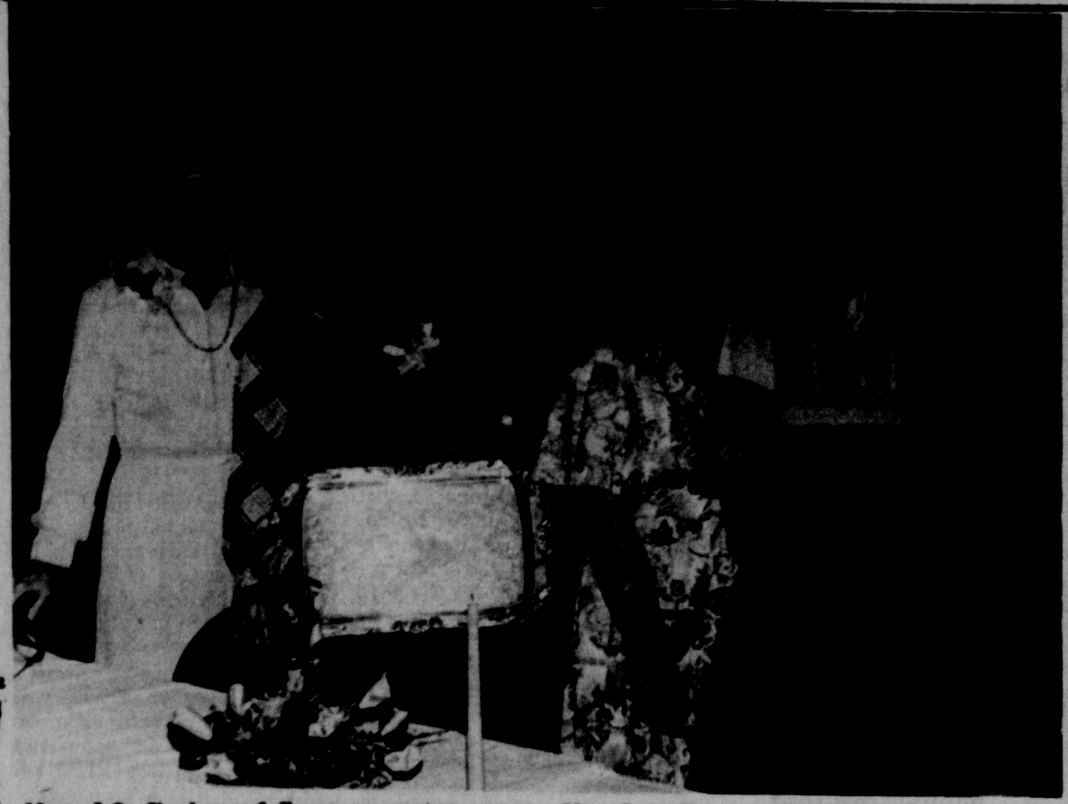
Graffiti dance set November 6

American Graffiti is the theme for a dance scheduled Nov. 6 to be held at the KA Lodge in Canyon under the sponsorship of Xi Kappa Zeta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority.

Tiny Lynn and Band will provide the music. The dance is set to begin at 9 p.m. and conclude at 1 a.m. Tickets are $6 per person and include free beer and set-ups.



Mrs. J.O. Parker of Canyon, center, was honored with a silver tray and the naming of a scholarship fund in her honor at the 74th anniversary of the founding of Delta Zeta sorority last Sunday. Pictured, from left, are Mrs. Sam Fore, visiting Province Alumnae Director; Mrs. John Gullat, visiting National Director; Mrs. Parker; Mrs. Merle Kilpatrick and Mrs. Jim Fitzgerald, president of the Canyon DZ alumnae.

Delta Zetas celebrate founding

The 74th anniversary of the founding of the Delta Zeta Sorority was celebrated by the Canyon-Amarillo Alumnae Chapter along with the pledges and active members of the Zeta Zeta chapter from West Texas State University.

Eighty six members and special guests attended the luncheon which was held at one o'clock at the Quality Inn in Amarillo last Sunday.

At the conclusion of the meal, a candlelight ceremony conducted by the Misses Carrie Ferguson, Janis Magee, Patti Snodgrass, Nikki McCarter, Johnny Porter, Debbie Hill, Beth Ann Hurder, and Mrs. Rose Kinser was held honoring the six women who founded the sorority in 1902 at Miami University, in Ohio.

Climaxing the event, Mrs. Patti Short Kilpatrick announced the establishment of the Lenna Foster Parker Scholarship Fund. The collegiate chapter serenaded Mrs. Parker as she was presented a silver tray. She has been the recipient of two national awards, the Acoth Award, and more recently the Alice Huenefeld Award as the Outstanding Collegiate Chapter Director.

Annette Cook, from the scholarship committee, announced that $2,020 had been received in donations and pledges to the scholarship fund which will be presented next year on Founders Day.

Special guests attending the luncheon included Mrs. Sam Fore, Province Alumnae Director from Corpus Christi, Texas; Mrs. John Gullat, National Director from Austin; Mr. and Mrs. Foster Parker and Debbie from Happy; Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Parker from Dawn; Miss Ivy Parker and Miss Bertha Parker from Austin.

The chapters will meet again Nov. 22 at the Canyon Hills Church of Christ in Canyon at 5:30 p.m. Chairman will be Miss Jill Johnston, assisted by Helen Boatright, Ann Stephens, Marsha Watson, Beverly Peters, Edith Priddy, Martha Olson, and Deborah Sue Yauck.

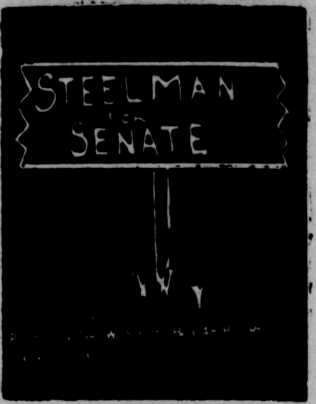
Hospital's auxiliary will discuss monitor

Palo Duro Hospital Auxiliary will hold a general membership session Monday morning at 10 a.m. in the Blue Room of Palo Duro Hospital.

The hospital auxiliary welcomes anyone interested in serving in a voluntary capacity at the hospital to attend the meeting for further information about membership.

A main item of the business session will be a report by Mrs. Johnny McBroom on the current status of the heart monitor account. The account includes numerous donations from individuals and funds being raised through a ticket sale being conducted by the auxiliary.

Tickets are being sold by auxiliary members for a painting by local artist, Carl Smith. The winner will be announced following the Dec. 15 drawing.



Photograph restoration topic of society's meet

Restoration and copying of old photographs was the program presented by Jim Sands for the High Plains Genealogical Society, at the regular October meeting at the Cornette Library, WTSU, on Tuesday the 27th.

Mr. Sands of Britains's Studio of Canyon discussed the way he would go about copying from an old photograph, making first a negative and cleaning the negative to get a good print. An explanation of the expected quality of reprints from black and white, from charcoal, from glossy, from gold tones and from silk, was shown with Mr. Sands showing some actual pictures that he had worked with.

An explanation was given as to why larger pictures usually reproduce to smaller prints much better than smaller pictures to larger ones. He also showed how clothing and background spots had been changed. He advised going back to original negatives where possible. He also told of reproducing pictures from tintypes.

Alan Gabehart, president conducted a business meeting, which included a report of the nominating committee chaired by Mrs. Mary Huntington and composed of Mrs. C. N. Cosby and R. A. Smith.

Elected to serve for the 1977 year are the following: Joanne Reynolds, president; Scott Downing, vice-president; Edith M. Priddy, secretary; Garrett Welch, treasurer; Lois Prichard, historian; and Alan Gabehart, parliamentarian.

Closing out this year's meetings will be a special dinner at the Railroad Crossing at 7:30 on Nov. 9. At this time the new officers will be installed and a short program, will be given.

AAUW dessert session set

"Young People In Trouble" will be the program for Canyon chapter of the American Association of University Women as they meet for a dessert session Saturday afternoon, Nov. 6.

Belinda Pillow, administrator and resource developer for Institutional Child Care, will be the speaker at the 2 p.m. meeting. The group will meet at the home of Dr. Ruth Lowes, 1506 Creekmere, and co-hostesses will include Louise Baker, Audrey Sanders and Dorothy Smith.

HD agent attends national meeting

Becky Hall, county extension agent for home economics of Randall County, has been in Portland, Oregon this week.

Mrs. Hall was attending the National Home Economics Association meeting where she was an alternate delegate representing District I of Texas.

USING THE TAX RATE TO SLOW INFLATION

As every consumer knows, inflation is one of the serious problems we face today.

I believe the federal income tax can be used to slow inflation and at the same time provide some relief for taxpayers. To that end, I will introduce legislation in the Congress which would require that the tax bracket boundaries, the personal exemption and the standard deduction, be adjusted annually to reflect the year's change in the cost of living. This would particularly benefit low and middle income families and people on fixed incomes.

Right now, even the 50 million Americans who enjoy cost-of-living escalators in their incomes, and the additional millions who receive income raises based at least partially on an employer's recognition that his employees face inflation, are hurt by the current tax system. This system imposes federal income taxes based on personal income in dollar amounts. Even though the dollars are purchasing less, due to inflation, the taxes increase because the dollar-amount has increased. My bill would have the effect of taxing actual purchasing power instead.

At the same time, my bill would act as a brake on inflation because the federal government would be forced to tighten its spending as tax revenues declined. Congress would then be forced, for a change, to live up to its fiscal responsibilities, and proponents of new programs would have to be concerned about how their programs would be financed.

Voter's duties stressed at Sue Hite Club session

Stella Hill and Margaret Guidry presented the program on "More Personal Involvement in Government" for the Sue Hite Club's meeting Monday afternoon at the home of Virginia Allen, 301 26th Street.

The discussion centered on the platforms of both presidential candidates and was interspersed with the political humor of Will Rogers. In conclusion, they urged all local residents to vote with the reminder being emphasized with the Will Rogers saying "America is a great country but you can't live in it for nuthin."

Club members and guests were served refreshments as they arrived at the meeting. A brief business meeting was conducted and various reports were given.

Zoe Henry reported about the Fall Board meeting held Oct. 19 at Canadian. Eunice Haggard, chairman, reminded Sue Hite Club members that the club is to serve as hostess for the Federated Dinner on Nov. 8 and Frances Holman, president, urged all members of the club to attend and get better acquainted with members of other federated clubs in Canyon.

Martha Goodman reported to the club of plans to cooperate with other federated clubs of the city in providing transportation to the election polls on Nov. 2 for anyone needing the service.

Fine arts club meets Tuesday

Canyon Fine Arts Club will hear a program on "architecture" to be presented by Earl Parge Tuesday evening, Nov. 2.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Thelma Fulton, 1007 14th Street, with Marilyn Dees as co-hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Maxwell
nee Jacquie Lynn Carlton

Nuptial vows exchanged

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Paul Maxwell have established their home at 4310 Van Buren in Amarillo following the exchange of double ring marriage vows read Oct. 22 at Second Baptist Church of Amarillo with Charles G. Jones, pastor, officiating.

The bride is the former Jacquie Lynn Carlton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack W. Carlton of 4310 Van Buren, Amarillo, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray B. Maxwell of 8122 Western, Amarillo.

Matching spiral candelabras bearing 15 gold candles flanked each side of the central podium for the marriage service. Large floral bouquets of multicolored mums and carnations in fall colors of orange, yellow and gold highlighted the sanctuary setting.

Ms. Myra McPherson played appropriate wedding marches and accompanied Joe Joiner who sang "The Lord's Prayer." Richard Palmer played guitar accompaniment as his wife, Mrs. Richard Palmer, sang "The Wedding Song" and "My Gift."

For her wedding, the bride chose a floor length white wedding gown with lace and small pearls scattered over the dress. Styled with a high banded neck, the wedding dress featured long sleeves of sheer chiffon. Her wedding veil was knee length with a lace ruffle along the sides and bottom. The bride carried a bouquet of rust mums and carnations with yellow rosebuds which was arranged in a cascade styling and accented with rust colored ribbon.

The bridal attendants were dressed in rust colored suede-like dresses with ecru-colored lace accents and each carried multi colored fall bouquets with hurricane globes and burning candles.

Mrs. Jim Seaton was matron of honor and bridesmaids and bridesmatrons were Miss Linda Higgins, Mrs. James B. Helm, Jr. and Miss Gail Bandy.

Pete Godfrey served as best man and groomsmen were Mike Maxwell, Jim Seaton and Rusty Carlton. The groom's attendants wore brown tuxedoes with black velvet lapels and bow ties complementing ecru ruffled shirts.

Flower girl was Miss Serena Maxwell who wore a rust colored dress overlaid with an ecru lace pinafore. She carried a natural colored basket filled with yellow rose petals.

Ushering were David Oliver, Brian Carlton and Kelly Carlton.

The bride is employed with Furr Food #59 and the bridegroom is an employee of Carlton Construction. He attended Canyon Public Schools for 12 years and returned from a three year tour of duty with the United States Navy in November, 1975.

Marriage planned

The engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Annette Willis and David Robinson was formally announced at a party Oct. 9 at The Party Place in Seminole, Texas.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Willis of Seminole. She is a graduate of Seminole High School and a junior at West Texas State University.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Violet Robinson of Canyon and Ray Robinson of Amarillo. He is a graduate of Palo Duro High School in Amarillo and holds the bachelor and master's degrees from West Texas State University. He is presently teaching at William Jewell College in Liberty, Missouri.

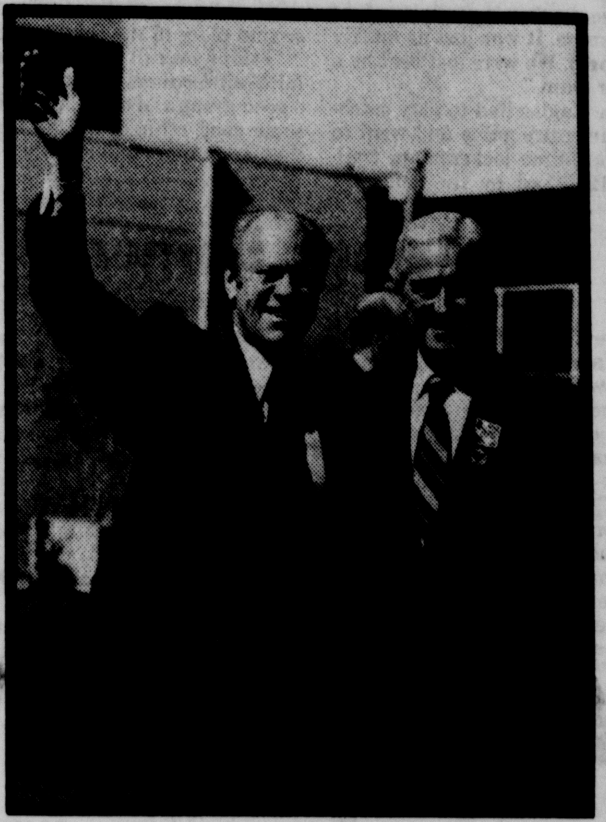
President Ford Is Best For Texas!



If you're undecided how to vote, just remember that President Ford is on the right side of the issues important to Texas, while his opponent is on the side of George Meany, Cesar Chevez and the big labor unions. President Ford doesn't doubletalk. He's a man we can trust.

Vote Texan... Vote President Ford

December vows set

Wedding vows for Miss Sally Buentello and Genaro Martinez, Jr. have been set for Dec. 11.

Miss Buentello is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John (Juan) Buentello of 118 Avenue U in Lubbock.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Genaro Martinez, Sr. of 1908 8th Avenue, Canyon. He is employed with Palo Duro Hospital in Canyon.

The marriage ceremony is scheduled to be read at 2 p.m. Dec. 11 at El Buen Spanish Pentecostal Church in Lubbock with a reception following. The couple plans to reside in Canyon.

Food basket is BSP project for November

Preceptor Gamma Chi chapter members of Beta Sigma Phi sorority will be bringing food items for a Thanksgiving basket to their next meeting, Nov. 9, in the home of Betty Patterson.

The chapter's meetings during October included a session Oct. 12 in the home of Kay Thomas with the hostess presenting the book review program on "Too Much Anger, Too Many Tears," by Janet and Paul Gotkin.

Attending the early October meeting were Wynema Brotherton, Sammye Stroud, Virginia Rossiter, Lucille Robinson and the hostess, Kay Thomas.

On Oct. 26 the chapter met with Betty Sue Patterson and heard a review of the book "Why Not The Best" by Jimmy Carter, which was presented by Jeanne Kuhlman.

During the business meeting a reinstatement was issued for Marie Manley, who has been on leave of absence from the chapter.

Those attending the late October meeting were Wynema Brotherton, Sammye Stroud, Virginia Rossiter, Lucille Robinson, Kay Thomas, Jean Irwin, Jeanne Kuhlman and the hostess, Betty Sue Patterson.

Federated clubs dinner scheduled

The annual dinner for all federated clubs of Canyon has been scheduled for Monday evening, Nov. 8, to be held at the University Church of Christ fellowship hall.

Participating in the annual event will be members of the University Study Club, Woman's Book Club, Sue Hite Club, Heritage Woman's Club, Canyon Study Club and the Les Amies Juniorette Club.

Arrangements for the dinner and program are being handled through the Canyon Federated Club Council.

Eagles take Dumas win; Demons live up to name

By KEVIN LONG

Canyon's 20-14 victory over Dumas last Friday night was rife with oddity from top to toe. Dumas started the contest with an on-side kick and ended it with what closely resembled an anti-busing, demonstration. The feature attraction was Demon coach Jack Moss whose childish demeanor nearly caused a wild free-for-all governed by the rules of the jungle at the game's conclusion.

With less than a minute to play, the Eagles on top 20-14 and with possession of the ball, over 2,000 spectators, along with both teams, had to endure the attention of Moss, who stormed onto the field, (an automatic penalty) berated the officials and just generally acted like a demon. His Hamlet went unappreciated, and Moss was told to take his histrionics some place else, as the officials marked off 30 yards worth of unsportsmanlike conduct penalties. When the game ended, the Dumas players, following the charming example set by their coach, started a primitive assault on the Canyon players which took several moments to break up.

The game was not much easier for the Eagles who suffered alarming lapses of concentration and as a result escaped with a narrow victory over a team clearly inferior.

"We weren't as spirited and didn't play with the gusto we had been playing with," admitted Canyon coach Deane Wright. "But we did play well enough to win and I think we deserved to win."

Canyon went 77 yards in 9 plays to take a 7-0 lead with 3:22 left in the first quarter with Gary Ward running over from the three. The score was set up by a 55 yard run by Joe Luquette, who gained 93 yards on ten carries for the evening.

The Eagles scored on the last play of the half when Ricky Cooper delivered a perfect strike to end Randy Langen for a 50 yard touchdown pass.

At the half, Dumas had seven first downs and 116 yards rushing but no points, with Canyon leading 13-0.

But inside the eleven minute mark of the third quarter, Demon fullback Scott Hutchinson, the leading rusher of the night with 202 yards, went 58 yards for a touchdown to cut the lead to 13-6 with 11:11 remaining in the period.

Canyon answered on the next possession with another 50 yard completion from Cooper to Ward to set up a 16 yard touchdown run by Luquette, which gave Canyon a 20-6 lead with 8:18 left in the third period.

The Eagles appeared eager to give Dumas the game late in the final period. On a first and ten from their 22, Canyon fumbled with less than seven minutes to play, setting the Demons up on Canyon's 19. The Demons moved the needed yardage in six plays with Hutchinson, who carried five of the plays, scoring from the three. Quarterback Kent Hazen hit Roger Lewis deep in the end zone for the two point conversion to cut the lead to 20-14.

On the first play after the kick-off, Ward fumbled after gaining seven yards to give Dumas the ball on the Eagle 37 with 4:30 left to play.

The Eagle defense dug in to prevent Dumas from scoring, although the Demons, aided by a 26 yard sweep around left end by Danny McCandles, did get down to the six yard line where their last effort ended.

"After fumbling and giving them an opportunity to score we were very fortunate," said Wright.

Canyon took over at that point, just fell on the ball each play, and with the game obviously lost Moss decided to take the opportunity to showcase his maturity.

The Eagles, now 6-3 for the season, have an open date next week and will go for one of their best records in history the following Friday when they wind up the season against Levelland at Buffalo Bowl.

Businessmen discuss secretary role

"What I Like and Dislike About My Secretary" was the discussion for three area businessmen who spoke for the Thursday evening meeting of Tierra Blanca chapter of the National Secretaries Association, International.

In addition to listing as their "likes" for a secretary to include skills, education and experience, tact, accuracy, adaptability, and a youthful attitude and spirit, the three businessmen pointed out the need for a sense of humor and mutual respect.

Dislikes mentioned by the bosses were contentiousness, gossiping and arrogance, along with lack of accuracy.

Presenting the program were Bill Alexander, manager of personnel administration with Mesa Petroleum; Garrald Belote, marketing manager of Data Processing for IBM; Bob Gleason, personnel supervisor with Diamond Shamrock Oil and Gas Company.

Clarissa Thomas, president of the chapter and secretary to Judge Woody Pond, presided and introduced the chapter's guests.

Guests included Dr. Albert R. Mitchell, Dean of the School of Business at West Texas State University; Dr. Enid Bates, coordinator and advisor of programs for women at WTSU; Emily Landrum, CPS, and Roevella Baker, both employees of Amarillo College; Evelyn Glover, of the Juvenile Probation Office for Randall County; Kelli McBride, former chapter member; and Sue Chandler and Mary Delacruz, both of Hereford.

During the business meeting CPS keys were presented to the chapter's two members who most recently attained their CPS ratings. Receiving the pins were Mrs. Phyllis Custer and Mrs. Carolyn Landram.

Refreshments were served by Louise Gunther and Lou Ritter at the conclusion of the meeting held in the community room of First National Bank in Canyon.

The chapter's next meeting will be Nov. 18 and is a dinner meeting at the Caison House in Hereford. Mrs. Irene McKinster will present the program on "living wills" at that meeting. She is the director of marketing for Hereford State Bank.

Canyon members of the Tierra Blanca chapter will gather at the parking lot of First National Bank at 6 p.m. on Nov. 18 for the trip to Hereford.

Purple sees hopes dashed by P'view

The Canyon Junior High School purple team, mired down by muddy conditions last Thursday in Plainview, dropped their district title hopes by losing to Plainview's blue team 12-8.

"Our main problem was playing out of town under very bad conditions," said Coach Gary Conner. "It was a mudfest. But of course that's not really much of an excuse. It was just as muddy for them. We were just beat by a better team."

The Eagles had to play catch-up the entire game and went to the half-time locker room trailing 12-0. Led by the defensive play of Bruce Byrd and Bill Gruhlkey, they held Plainview scoreless the second half. The offense, led by Jeff McKay's 115 yards rushing, could only produce 8 points, on a 40-yard touchdown run by McKay. For the evening the Eagles gained 340 yards rushing and 20 passing.

They have concluded the year with a 3-1 district record and second place in the south zone.

"I think overall it was successful," said Conner. "I think this is a good group and there should be some good athletes by the time they are juniors and seniors.

JV dumps Borger

The Canyon High School Junior Varsity football team, which is now 6-1 for the year, scored a touchdown in each quarter and went on to defeat Borger 28-6.

"Considering the weather, I think we moved the ball pretty well," said Coach Bob Schneider. "We had to run the ball just about all of the time but we did that consistently."

The Eagles were led by Mike Moore, who scored two touchdowns during the night and ran for 158 yards in 21 carries.

Moore scored his first two touchdowns in the first and second quarter on runs of 57 and 1 yards to give Canyon a 14-0 half-time lead.

In the third period Jeff Wisebart threw a 15-yard pass to Keith Melton to give Canyon a 21-0 lead.

In the final period Mike Hunt ran 42 yards for an Eagle score ending the game 28-6.

Eddie Clement added all of the extra points for the Eagles.

Canyon will play its final game of the season at 7 p.m. this Thursday at home against Palo Duro.

Co. supporting cost cut legislation

Randall County commissioners are expected to be in the vanguard of a movement during the state legislative session which begins in January to make the state pick up the tab on a variety of mandated programs carried on at county level.

The commissioners have initiated and supported several legislative proposals which have received the endorsement of state-wide lobbying organizations.

And, they are expected to keep well abreast of legislative happenings next spring with an eye to keeping legislators from passing bills which require more county ad valorem tax expenditures.

Well over a dozen proposals will go to the legislature from county-originated sources in January, proposals which would or could alter the responsibilities of several county office-holders.

Randall County commissioners, for example, have initiated and supported proposed legislation to provide a state-wide one per cent sales tax with the funds to be returned to counties. They have also initiated proposals for increases in fees of office charged by various county-level office-holders.

County Judge Woody Pond supports what he sees as a trend in county government to demand the state provide funding for state-mandated programs.

"In many cases," he said, "I think this is a good move. It's time some of these things be taken care of by the state.

"They set up the regulations requiring counties to do certain things and if they are requiring us to do them, they should put some monetary support in there."

Local commissioners supported several efforts made by the Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association recently to convince the state to take funding responsibility for state-mandated programs.

Key proposals which are assured of local support include one aimed at the establishment of a one per cent sales tax levy on sales of taxable items sold within the counties.

The proposal would provide the sales tax only if approved by voters in the county.

Randall commissioners passed a similar resolution two months ago, asking the legislature to enact the legislation which is similar to that now in effect for Texas cities.

Another resolution, support for which comes from the local commissioners, calls for the legislature to adopt the use of fiscal notes for any legislation passed concerning county government. Currently, the legislature provides notes showing the fiscal impact of legislation on bills proposed for alterations in state government.

Similarly, the counties have resolved to support legislation which would give commissioners full authority over expenditures from their local budgets.

One resolution adopted by the state association favors repeal of current laws which permit the ordering of expenditures by persons other than commissioners, and opposes any future laws which would require the expenditure of tax dollars over which the commissioners court cannot exercise authority.

The resolution apparently takes solid aim at four specific offices, which are funded through county taxes and fees, the expenditure of which is controlled by persons other than commissioners. Those offices include the juvenile probation office, the adult probation office, the county auditor's office and the district courts. District judges control to a large extent the expenditures in those offices.

District courts are the target of another similar resolution which seeks legislation requiring the state to pick up the district-court-mandate fees paid appointed attorneys on criminal cases.

The resolution notes that current law requires a minimum fee for an appointed attorney of $50 per day and that the fees are now paid out of the county treasury on the order of the district judge.

One resolution asks for legislation increasing the fees charged for services provided by various office-holders in the courthouse. Randall Commissioners initiated a joint resolution concerning the fees charged in offices.

Several resolutions ask direct state aid for providing foster child care services, and for county right-of-way purchases for state and U.S. highways.

One also asks for an increase in motor vehicle license fees.

While related to the thrust of these resolutions, one proposal asks the legislature to pass a law allowing counties to have a higher constitutional ceiling on the local tax rates. Current ceiling is 80 cents per $100 valuation. The ceiling sought is $1.20 per $100.

Survey of WT freshmen alters recruiting plans

A new survey of freshman student opinion at West Texas State University has resulted in a new thrust for the college's student recruiters, Director of Development Keith Winter said last week.

The survey, administered and returned by nearly 40 per cent of the 1790 freshmen who entered freshman orientation during the summer, asked the students to list the reasons for selecting WTSU for post-secondary education.

The survey revealed that nearly 30 per cent of the students surveyed come from home-towns between 100 and 200 miles distant from the university's campus.

It also reveals that those surveyed made their decision on where to attend college during their senior year in high school.

The bulk of the students surveyed come from families with an annual income above $12,000.

Nearly 50 per cent of those surveyed have as an ultimate goal the attainment of a baccalaureate degree. Fewer than 20 per cent will seek the masters degree.

The surveys asked the students to rate nearly two dozen pre-selected factors as their primary reasons for attending WTSU.

In order of selection, the students said they chose WTSU because of size of the student body; because of advice from friends; because of major programs available; and because of the nearness of the campus to their home-towns.

Athletic programs and various public relations related programs rated low among the students surveyed as reasons for attending.

Winter said the survey has had an impact on the approaches which will be taken this year in seeking students for the campus.

His staff is currently developing a manual for use by high school counsellors in advising high school students on programs available to them at the university.

The manual will go to 500 high school counsellors in the region and down-state, Winter said. It will be prepared so they can quickly find a specific program offering and advise the student on pre-requisites, personnel and other significant information.

In addition, Winter said, the staff will be including a check sheet for students through the annual mini-catalogue, which tells them in simple language the various steps to take to obtain admission to the university.

A major thrust this year, Winter said, will be a mailing to 100,000 seniors in Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, and Oklahoma high schools.

The university purchased a mailing list of the top 100,000 seniors, he said, and will correspond with them about attending WTSU.

One down-state college pursued a similar approach, he said, and had 9 per cent of the students contacted return correspondence for more information.

This year's recruiting effort has made some significant inroads, Winter said, noting that WTSU recruiters who visit in area high schools have seen increased interest among students about attending the university.

Sauerkraut brewing for annual fest

Sauerkraut is brewing in the basement of the parish hall at Umbarger in preparation for the 24th annual Umbarger Community German Sausage Festival to be held Nov. 14.

The kraut, which was put in crocks several weeks ago to age, is a tradition of the festival along with generous helpings of the specially prepared German sausage.

The festival began in 1952 as a project of St. Mary's Catholic Church parish and through the years has developed into an area wide event.

For the past several years, the festival has included a country store which offers home-baked items and take-home portions of kraut and sausage.

The festival also includes a bazaar filled with holiday gift items made by folks from the Umbarger community.

Proceeds raised by the festival dinner and other coinciding projects go toward upkeep of the church building. Local and area residents are invited to join the community for the festival events on Nov. 14.

Business Manager Ronnie Wood told school board members two weeks ago Canyon's valuations may be only half the fair market value.

Because the district's valuations were lower than market value prior to the 1975 legislative session, local taxpayers had to come up with additional taxes to provide about $140,000 for the 1975-76 school year and twice that figure for the current school year.

The legislature is to consider new school financing legislation during the session beginning in January, but no major proposals for change in the current system have surfaced from various state agencies dealing with educational financing.

Thompson is to report to the school board during their 7:30 p.m. meeting Tuesday the figures he receives Monday and their possible impact on the district's tax structure.

There is an appeal mechanism provided if the board feels the figures are erroneous.

The district did not appeal the figures two years ago.

Other business slated for Tuesday night's session includes discussion of approval of a special interdisciplinary course for high school students funded through the state. Funds have been provided for the hiring of a part-time teacher to relieve teachers assigned to the interdisciplinary course.

Thompson said the course is designed to tie together several liberal arts subjects for an overall perspective.

The board is also expected to review new administrative policies.

The board meets in the board room of the administration building (old Neblett Hospital).

O'Neall Jr. Congress Fund, Washington, $500.

Citizens making higher than average contributions are Bonnie Bragg, listed as an Amarillo housewife, $500; R. M. Lemon of Booker, $650; and Gabe Anderson of Bovina, $500.

In the local race for tax collector, Burks lists total contributions through Oct. 21 of $1150 and total expenditures of $1058.

Mrs. Bruse lists contributions of $1627 and expenditures of $505.

Burks lists contributions for the period between Sept. 23 and Oct. 21 from Webb & Bragg Farms of Amarillo, $100; Mr. and Mrs. James Thomas of Canyon, $10; Vernon Harman of Canyon, $25; and Bob Burks, $25.

Mrs. Bruse lists contributions during the period from the Texas Republican Campaign Committee, $200; Amarillo Republican Women's Club Campaign Committee, $460.

A Concerned Citizens Committee, which lists support for Mrs. Bruse, notes no contributions during the period, but expenditures of $138 for advertising. John Kenehan, unsuccessful candidate for the state legislature two years ago, is listed as treasurer of that committee.

Attorney for those seeking deannexation of the Barfield land, Robert Templeton of Amarillo, agreed with Thompson that future guidelines are needed.

His comments came after the county board had voted approval of the Barfield land deannexation.

But, Templeton also told the county board he foresees no other de-annexation requests coming to the board for approval except a possible request for the deannexation of the so-called Estacado West subdivision, which is west of Estacado Estates.

Such a request, Templeton told the board, would probably have little merit for approval.

"I believe the board has seen the last of this for awhile," he said.

County school board members delayed discussion and action on possible guidelines the board will use itself in determining the tractability of future de-annexation requests.

Board Chairman R. B. Gist Jr. delayed discussion until the next quarterly meeting of the board when updated maps of the Canyon and Amarillo district boundary lines will be available.

But, several board members — principally Charles Purcell, Ronald Boyd and Gene Parker — stressed the need for future guidelines.

Boyd, Parker and Gist voted in favor of the de-annexation of the Barfield land while Gordon Hendricks and Purcell voted against.

Discussion about the possible impact of the de-annexation centered on Estacado Estates.

Ernest Rosenbaum, who said he lives in the Estacado subdivision, argued that the county board should turn down the deannexation plea.

Rosenbaum contended the deannexation would have the effect of insuring that no public school would be built in the Estacado Estates area in the future. And he contended it might also have the effect of convincing Estacado Estates residents to petition similarly.

However, several other residents of the subdivision argued that de-annexation of the Barfield land would, in effect, give them the option in the future of either opting for de-annexation or staying in the Canyon district.

Templeton told the board he felt their decision on the request would have to be based on sound reasons, if that decision was to deny the plea.

He was backed in this contention by Dist. Atty. Randall Sherrod, who told the board they could not be arbitrary in their decisions.

Earlier in the day the board voted to approve de-annexation of the Sleepy Hollow subdivision.

In other business Thursday, the county board was urged by County Judge Woody Pond, who serves as ex-officio county school superintendent, to meet with local legislators to discuss continued financing for the operation of the board.

A law passed during the last legislative session will eliminate state support for county school boards and ex-officio officers in December 1978.

Race . . .

Tuesday ballot.

A major write-in effort throughout the state is anticipated by election observers in the race for associate justice of the state Supreme Court, place 2. Houston Attorney Don Yarbrough, who faces 19 civil suits and possible disbarment or disciplinary proceedings by the State Bar, is alone on the ballot although he has drawn two write-in challengers.

The challengers are Sam Houston of Denton, a state district judge, and Tom Lorance of Houston, an attorney.

Yarbrough, his opponents note, is not to be confused with the Don Yarborough who ran several years ago for state-wide office. Nor is he to be confused with Ralph Yarborough, the former U. S. Senator from Texas.

Four men are running for election on four different party tickets in the Texas Railroad Commission race. Democrat Jon Newton, Republican Walter Wendlandt, Fred Garza of the Raza Unida Party, and Pat O'Reilly of the Socialist Workers Party, are on the ballot. None have brought their campaigns to Canyon.

A hotly contested race has evolved in the sprint for the 13th District's U. S. Congressman's seat.

Incumbent Jack Hightower, a Democrat, faces Republican Bob Price, who held the seat for eight years before losing it to Hightower in 1974.

Hightower, a Vernon attorney, has stressed his voting record during his campaign for re-election, while Price, a Pampa rancher, has attacked Hightower for his party affiliation and his voting record.

The American Party will also have a candidate on the ballot in the congressional race. He is William K. Hathcock.

U. S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who dropped an aborted attempt at the Democratic Presidential nomination last summer, seeks re-election against Republican Challenger Alan Steelman. American Party candidate Margorie Gallion and Socialist Worker Party candidate Pedro Vasques are also on the ballot in that race.

Tuesday's ticket will be highlighted by the Presidential election which pits President Gerald Ford and his vice presidential running mate Robert Dole against Democratic challengers Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale.

Ford visited in Canyon during his campaign last spring.

Voters will also have the opportunity to vote a straight ticket in all four parties on the ballot.

In addition to the personalities who head the ballot, area residents will also be voting for or against two proposed state constitutional amendments.

The first proposal on the ballot seeks voter approval for the issuance of an additional $400 million in Texas Water Development Bonds.

The second proposal seeks approval for an additional $100 million in water development bonds which may be used by cities and other state subdivisions to improve water quality.

This year's ballot is printed in both English and Spanish, in accordance with Federal Voting Act mandates.

NCAA rule tossed out

The NCAA, which put West Texas State University's basketball program on probation last spring, has softened its stand on recruiting practices which resulted in disciplinary action for the Buffs.

Dr. Jack Bullock, WTSU advisor to the president for athletics, said the NCAA has now said the university's basketball recruiters may physically take recruits to the Amarillo Civic Center to show them the facilities in which they will play if they come to WTSU.

Earlier rules by the NCAA said such trips to Amarillo were prohibited.

Bullock said the new ruling was made after the university appealed its case to the NCAA.

In previous years, Bullock said, the basketball recruiters have been forced to show only slides of the Amarillo facility to potential players as a result of the old rule.

The alleged violation of that rule when WTSU recruiters showed a potential athlete the Amarillo facility was cited by the NCAA as one of its complaints against the basketball program last fall.

The charges resulted in the program losing several scholarships for two years.

Bullock termed the NCAA action "a concession" and said he believes it will help future recruiting.

Sheep number up in canyon

The transplanted aoudad sheep population in Palo Duro Canyon continues to increase, with an estimated 19 per cent more sheep this year roaming the crags.

This year's helicopter survey, covering Randall County and three other Panhandle counties, was conducted by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists. It shows an estimated 1400 to 1500 sheep in the total herd, an increase of 200 to 300 over the 1975 census.

Good habitat and the dispersal of sheep over a relatively large area are the two most cited causes for the increase.

Aoudad sheep are listed as game animals in eight counties including Randall. A permit to hunt the sheep is required. This year's hunting season is from Nov. 13-19.

Inventory due here

Bill Casteel, District Conservationist, Soil Conservation Service, Canyon, and Fred Pringle, Soil Scientist, Amarillo, attended a training conference in Temple last week on land inventorying and monitoring.

The Soil Conservation Service has been given the responsibility to do land inventory and monitoring in the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Randall County has been selected as one of eight counties in Texas to make a farmland survey. The survey will locate the best land for producing food, feed, fiber, forage and oilseed crops.

According to Casteel the farmland will be identified as prime farmland, unique farmland and farmland of statewide importance. Prime farmland is land best suited for producing food, feed, forage, fiber, and oilseed crops.

Unique farmland is land other than prime farmland that is used for the production of specific high-value food and fiber crops. Examples of such crops are alfalfa, carrots, sugarbeets, sunflower, and sweetcorn. Farmland of statewide importance is land, in addition to prime and unique farmlands, that is of statewide importance for production of food, feed, fiber, forage, and oilseed crops.

Halloween is almost as eventful and fun for Canyon area youngsters as Christmas.

Besides trick-or-treating in the city Saturday night, the youngsters had the opportunity to don their masks and costumes Thursday night for the annual Halloween Carnival sponsored by the Study Club. Abbie White was named Halloween Carnival Queen during the evening.

Children from High Plains Children's Home were treated to a special Halloween party by Canyon High School home economics students on Thursday.

And, a Halloween spook house in the second floor of the old First National Bank Building downtown provided life-like scares for young and old through the weekend.

Jimma Christopher, the witch, dispensed a witch's brew for youngsters from High Plains Childrens Home Thursday night as the Canyon High Future Homemakers of America sponsored a Halloween party. Miss Christopher is serving Michelle Grady.

Three ghouls and a waif mix up a treat for visitors to the Haunted Halloween House which was open this past week and weekend. The West Texas State University band fraternity and sorority sponsored the haunted house in an abandoned downtown second-story area.

County to get report on new reappraisal

The firm which is currently performing a county-wide revaluation of property will tell Randall County commissioners Monday the methods used in the study.

Representatives of Southwest Appraisal Co. of Austin will appear before commissioners during their 1 p.m. meeting to discuss the on-going reappraisal effort.

The commissioners hired the firm at a base cost of $243,000 to perform the year-long study to bring property values up to fair market value.

Other items on the Monday agenda are routine:

* Discussion of bids for two automobiles by Sheriff Cliff Longest;
* Discussion of a replat of an area in Lake Tanglewood;
* Hiring of new employees for the tax collector's office and the county judge's office.

Commissioners did not meet last week. They meet regularly in commissioners courtroom on the second floor of the courthouse in Canyon.

Rhena Jobe is WT queen

Rhena Jobe of Seminole, Tex., was named Homecoming Queen for West Texas State University last week.

Miss Jobe, a pre-med major, was elected in a traditional-style balloting. She won out over several other girls and one cow — Clarabelle, introduced into the election by two area pranksters.

First runner-up in the election was Esther Jackson and second runner-up was Carrie Ferguson.

WT group sets meet

Officers will be elected and account reports will be presented at the annual meeting of the West Texas State University Foundation at noon Wednesday in the Buffalo Room of the East Dining Hall.

Current chairman of the foundation is Leonard Gunderson of Amarillo. Vice chairman is Ken Irwin of Gruver and secretary is Dale Hall, assistant professor of accounting at WTSU.

In existence for the past 18 years, the foundation is composed of 40 to 45 different funds.

Foundation money is awarded to students in financial need and given in the form of academic scholarships in such areas as journalism, geology, business, anthropology, mathematics, Boy's Ranch and the library fund.

Swine flu shots at several sites

A night session for administration of the swine flu vaccine has been set for Monday, Nov. 1., between 5-10 p.m. at Amarillo's Health Department, 417 South Austin (one block north of Northwest Texas Hospital).

Canyon and Randall County residents may take their swine flu shots at the department during any of the regularly scheduled sessions. Swine flu shots are being given on Monday mornings between 8:30 and noon, Wednesdays from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. and Thursdays from 1-5 p.m. at the Health Department.

Local residents over 23 may also obtain swine flu shots at Palo Duro Clinic during regular office hours from 9-5 at no charge. In addition, local residents may obtain the swine flu shot from Dr. Dudley Moore's office during regular hours with a $5 service fee to cover the cost of record keeping and supplies.

Four due SWPS honors

Award certificates will be given 4 Canyon residents out of a total of 113 employees to be honored Nov. 9 by Southwestern Public Service Company at a service awards dinner in Amarillo for service ranging from 5 to 35 years.

Diamond-studded emblems for 30 years' service will be presented to Joe Grady Crowley, Floyd W. Lassiter and Cecil W. O'Donald by Berl M. Springer, president and chief operating officer of the company.

Joining the quarter-century club with 25 years' service will be Jimmie Dale Moore.

This is to be the third of four service award dinners held throughout the company's territory. A total of 329 employees, with a combined service of 6,385 years, will be honored.

Brass concert is set

A Brass Ensemble concert will be held at West Texas State University at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the university's Branding Iron Theatre.

Selections scheduled on the program include "Six Pieces" by Johann Pezel, "Canzon septimi toni No. 1" by Giovanni Gabrieli and "Von Himmel Hoch" by Bach.

Other presentations will be Victor Ewald's "Symphony for Brass," Albert Cobine's "Vermont Suite" and Leonard Lebow's "Suite for Brass."

Instrumentalists performing in the ensemble will be Ken VanWinkle, Duncan Brown, Charles Broussard and Victor Denis, all playing trumpet; Janet Claypoole, Todd Parker and Eric Primm will play the horn parts.

Tracy Collins, Gary Mingus, Marvin Perry and John Jacoby will play trombone sections, while John Owen will perform on the euphonium and Russell Blanchard the tuba part.

For rides for voters

Projects designed to "get out the vote" on Tuesday for the general elections have been organized by local groups.

Residents needing transportation to the voting polls on Tuesday may call any of the numbers listed below.

Transportation services for voters are being provided by the federated clubwomen of Canyon who list the phone numbers 655-3412 or 655-7284.

Also providing transportation for voters will be Sigma Nu fraternity members who list the numbers 655-8985 and 655-9982.

Kirklands have infant daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Kirkland of 919 Hickory in Muleshoe, announce the Oct. 21 birth of a daughter, Heather Marie, at Palo Duro Hospital in Canyon.

The baby girl weighed 6 pounds, 10 ounces and measured 20½ inches at birth. Her father is a coach and teacher with the Muleshoe Independent School District.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Dick Kirkland of Vega and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pietzsch of Roscoe, Texas.

Hex day costumes are not restricted to the student body as teachers join in the fun activities. Among those teachers participating at Canyon Junior High School on Friday were Nadine Lyles, history teacher; Gene Murray, English instructor; and Charlene Cooper, history teacher.

Canyon homes first in reappraisal

A seven-man crew is now knocking on doors and measuring houses in Canyon as part of the initial phase of a complete revaluation of property in Randall County.

The revaluation, which is costing county taxpayers more than $240,000, is to be completed by next summer.

Clyde Hamilton, president of Southwest Appraisal Co. of Austin, which has contracted with the county to perform the revaluation, said recently his crew has focused initial revaluation efforts on the City of Canyon.

About one-half the homes and businesses in the city have been appraised, he said.

Hamilton said he has no figures to indicate how much his figures deviate from the valuation figures currently on the county tax rolls and used to compute annual ad valorem taxes.

"We don't look at what's on the tax roll," he said.

Hamilton said his men are instructed to use accepted proceudres to establish fair market values for property and are encouraged not to use previous tax roll figures for such computations.

Nevertheless, Hamilton predicts that values established through his firm's survey will be significantly higher than the values now on the county's rolls.

The cost of construction has risen by nearly 10 per cent in the last five years, he noted.

The revaluation effort is apparently the first in county history.

Hamilton said his men use three basic approaches to establishing the values of property.

One approach establishes the prices for which homes and other property are selling currently in the county.

With this market approach, the revaluation team studies sales and prices within the taxing jurisdiction for the last two years and then contacts many of the owners to corroborate the reported information.

A second approach is termed the cost approach, he said. With this approach, he said, the team mentally rebuilds or replaces the building or home as of Jan. 1, using identical skill levels, materials and so on with depreciation subtracted.

The income approach is the third measure used to come up with a composite picture of the fair market value of property, he said. The income approach is particularly important in determining the value of commercial properties and rural lands, he said.

From these three approaches, Hamilton said, the team is able to work up formulas which are tailored for the county and which can be used to figure fair market values for property within the county.

Hamilton said his firm has made every effort to ensure that members of the team identify themselves and their purposes during the revaluation effort, which will require them to visually inspect each piece of real property in the county.

Team members have an identification card signed by Tax Assessor-Collector Mrs. Audrey Bruse, and have registered their license numbers with the city police and sheriff's office.

"We've had excellent cooperation," Hamilton said of the first leg of the revaluation in Canyon.

The revaluation schedule calls for Canyon properties to be inspected first, with Amarillo properties inspected later. Rural properties will be reappraised throughout the year-long period.

Hamilton said he sees no problem with the firm completing the revaluation by its deadline in June 1977.

Commissioners agreed to the outside revaluation last summer after Mrs. Bruse failed to attract any qualified appraisers to her office for the project.

She had initially begun the revaluation as an in-house effort, but last spring lost two key appraisers to higher-paying jobs.

UNICEF funds sought in citywide campaign

The United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF) will receive an assist locally as members of the Canyon Junior High School student Council join with the Junior High level of the Methodist Youth Fellowship for a "trick-or-treat project today.

Members of the two youth groups will meet at the city church this afternoon at 4 p.m. and will canvas the city between 4:30 and 5:30 p.m. to collect monetary contributions for UNICEF.

Established by the United Nations in December 1946, UNICEF provides three types of assistance projects in 102 countries having a child population of over 850 million under the age of 15. The UNICEF funds help governments during the planning stage to identify the needs of children and to help develop programs meeting those needs. UNICEF funds also provide material aid for a variety of supplies and equipment to benefit children of those countries along with training for child-welfare personnel within those countries.

Organizing the local effort was a cooperative effort for the Junior High Student Council sponsor, Susan Barnett, and Jerry Howard, sponsor of the Methodist Youth Fellowship group. Mrs. Barnett is also serving as UNICEF chairman for Heritage Woman's Club with committee assistance from Donna Cavrich and Johnnie Gordon.

The UNICEF "trick-or-treat" will be conducted late Sunday afternoon with a party for participants following at the city church.

Funeral conducted for W. Sims

Funeral services for Willie (Bill) Sims, 73, were held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in the First United Methodist Church of Happy.

Rev. Paul Heil, pastor of Happy First Baptist Church, officiated and interment was conducted at the Happy Cemetery. Local arrangements were handled by Schooler-Gordon Funeral Directors in Canyon. Serving as pallbearers were O.H. Rahlfs, George Edmonds, Jack Frost, Bob Francy, H.C. (Pete) McCarley, Leslie Waters, Robert Lee and Jack Caddell.

Born Feb. 1, 1903 at Valley Mills, Texas, Mr. Sims died Thursday afternoon at Palo Duro Hospital in Canyon. He was a farmer-stockman in the Happy area and moved to Happy in 1911.

He was married to the former Mable Leavitt on August 12, 1931 at Clovis, New Mexico.

The family has requested memorial gifts go to a favorite charity.

Survivors include his wife, Mable of Happy; a daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Morton of Palestine, Texas; two sons, Carl Sims and Carol Sims, both of Happy; a sister, Mrs. Marie Hughlett of Elsa, Texas; a brother, R.C. Sims of Happy; and six grandchildren.

Rocketry captivates junior highs; launch goes well

It seems no day for a launch.

The sky is one gray and sagging cloud, the air chill and a light mist has fallen to glisten in tiny beads on the dishevelled hair of the flight technicians.

Ground control is an unsophisticated-looking array of small and large boys, talking in tones uncharacteristic of the television scenes flashed from Houston for pre-flight suspense.

Even without the cameras, the blinking lights on chrome computer control panels, the boys are as animated as any anxious crew awaiting the final count-down.

Then, with a whoosh and a brief flash, the rocket streaks into the atmosphere, seeming to pierce the gray blanket above, and after too short a time floats to Earth to be retrieved, not by an awaiting fleet, but by more than two dozen Canyon Junior High School science buffs who are captivated by the residual enthusiasm of the space age.

At an age which two decades ago would have found the boys, all between 13 and 15 years old, projecting such energies towards the study and dreams of four-wheel motorized vehicles, these Canyon youngsters prepare to forge their dreams with the reality of space and transportation which is, literally, out of this world.

John Runyan, for example, is a 13-year-old junior high 8th grader, who discovered his interests in rocketry while watching man's first walk on alien soil eight years ago.

Runyan, the president of a just-organized Rockets International Club at CJHS, had been enthralled with wheel-less transportation even before starting elementary school here, harboring a desire to attend the U.S. Air Force Academy.

But, it was not until his 6th grade year that Runyan found a way to turn his dreams into reality with little expense.

While thumbing through a Boys Life magazine he found an advertisement for a catalogue from a company specializing in small self-propelled rockets. He ordered the catalogue, got it, bought his first rocket and has been hooked ever since.

"The part of it I like the best is the adventure," he says now.

About a year ago during the summer, Runyan found fellow enthusiasts in Guyle and Craig Corley, sons of Junior High Principal Dave Corley, and Monte Tillinghast. Together, they decided to form a small club devoted to the study and firing of and tinkering with rockets.

Slowly, their enthusiasm proved contagious in the junior high school setting.

Stan Ely, 13, vice president of the club, had been interested for some time in rocketry but really caught the bug several weeks ago when Runyan and several friends staged a rocket demonstration during junior high science classes.

Bill Stocker, a junior high science teacher, agreed earlier this semester to be advisor and has, himself, caught the bug.

Stocker feels the club, which now has about 30 members from all junior high grades, is a splendid opportunity for the members to observe the practical applications of the science and scientific principals they are learning in their classroom studies.

"It makes the classroom practical," Stocker says, "plus it's just a lot of fun for most of them."

To keep up with his students, Stocker has ended up studying a bit about rocketry and the workings of the small devices which his club members enjoy firing into the skies.

Rocketry as practiced by the club members need not be expensive, although many of the accessories for the small cylinders can seem as sophisticated as those used by NASA.

Countryman, the 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Brown of No. 4 Idlewood, said rocketry starter kits are available through catalogues and through hobby shops.

A starter kit contains a miniature launching pad, three engines, a cardboard rocket and instruction manual.

Other kits with more complicated and powerful rockets are also available.

Runyan said it is possible to buy a kit which contains a replica of the Saturn 5 rocket. The rocket stands 37 inches tall when constructed by the owner.

With suitable accessories, the junior rocketeers can shoot into near-space a rocket containing a capsule for a live animal, or a nose cone containing a tiny camera which will actually shoot still or movie pictures.

Depending on the size of the rocket and the capability of the engine — which is nothing more than a cardboard cylinder filled with propellent fuel — altitudes reached by the rockets range upwards of 3,000 feet.

The rockets are retrievable, many having been equipped with large parachutes or with smoke trail fuel.

While the pre-molded kits are fine and fun, Runyan says one goal of the new club is to construct a club rocket which runs on liquid fuel.

The club is compiling its own library although the CJHS library is, Runyan says, well equipped with books concerning rocketry and rocket history.

One of Stocker's functions as advisor to the club is to insure that the club members obey certain safety regulations when dealing with the rockets.

Runyan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Runyan of 1004 7th St. Ely is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ely who live north of Canyon.

Ready for launch

Watercolor exhibit honors memory of late Levi Cole

The American Watercolor Society will exhibit paintings beginning Oct. 31 through Nov. 10 in the North and South galleries of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum. A reception will open the show from 2 to 4:30 p.m., Oct. 31.

Museum hours for viewing the watercolor display are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Sundays.

Watercolorists represented in the exhibit by their works are Robert Vickrey, Marie Cooper, William Thon, Alex Ross, Doug Kingman and John Pike.

The American Watercolor Society has been sending out 100 watercolors every year since 1955 to fill a year's bookings in galleries and art centers across the nation. The watercolors are selected from the Annual Exhibition in New York.

Many paintings in the traveling show have won prizes in the parent exhibition in New York.

All pictures are for sale and purchasers cannot take possession of their paintings until the show circuit is completed.

The American Watercolor Society is in its second century of existence and America is reputed to have the strongest school of watercolor painters in the world.

The exhibit in the museum will feature such paintings as "Spring Snow in My Swamp" by John Pike, winner of the John Young Hunter Memorial Award from the AWS in 1976. "After the Rain," by Robert Vickery, also in the exhibit, was awarded the AWS Silver Medal of Honor.

The watercolor show is being sponsored by Mrs. Margaret Cole, in memory of Levi Cole, 1903-1976, a Canyon banker and supporter of the fine arts.

Canyon senior citizens recall flu epidemic of 1918

"They buried them without a song or a prayer," said Lewis Harvey, recalling the major flu epidemic that struck world-wide in 1918." "I saw them bury people when they hardly had enough left to let the caskets down."

Harvey was living in Happy then, and then moved to Missouri.

With the small outbreak of swine flu in New Jersey last winter, which caused three deaths, health officials have warned that a major epidemic may be on the way this year.

Because swine flu differs from the flu viruses that have been common, doctors said that few people would be immune to the disease if it spread this winter.

A major immunization program is now underway to vaccinate all adults and most chronically ill children against swine flu.

But in 1918, there were few medicines that had any effect on the disease.

"My neighbors all had flu," Mrs. Velma Grigsby said. "Doctors tell me and I've read that if the antibiotics we have today had been available then, a whole lot of people wouldn't have died.

"Then, they'd have flu and then it would go into pneumonia and they'd die. We have drugs that stop pneumonia now.

"Then there was no medicine to stop it," she said. "I remember how bad it was."

Mrs. Grigsby and her husband, Bob, said they wouldn't take the swine flu vaccine.

"We'll take our chances," she smiled.

Clarence N. Cosby, a Canyon old-timer, told of his experiences when the flu epidemic hit the Texas Panhandle.

Cosby was a young man then, on the South Plains, selling horses and mules and shipping some cattle at Kaufman.

"I was foot loose and fancy free, a single guy," he recalls. "And there was a little gal down in a little town of Kemp. I got acquainted with her and I'd go down and enjoy her company a little while every now and then.

"I finally got loose of that mule and horse business, and I came home disgruntled and put out, and then the moon started shining bright and I decided to write that gal a letter.

"Two or three weeks later, I got a letter from Kemp.

"It was from her Dad," he said. Cosby read that his girlfriend and her younger sister had died of flu.

"That was the saddest experience I had with the flu," he said. "I never lost any close kin to the flu but they died in droves."

Cosby also recalled a man in Tulia called Blackjack, a jack of all trades who had no real means of livelihood.

But Blackjack came into his own during the epidemic in that small town.

"He'd make the rounds and through the whole epidemic he was carrying medicine and running errands or whatever it was," Cosby said.

Cosby said he never contracted the ailment and hadn't been in a hospital in his life until about two years ago when he tangled with a locomotive on the Santa Fe lines north of Canyon.

Will he take the swine flu immunization?

"I hadn't thought about it," he said, "I don't suspect I will. I've been doing too good without it."

Evelyn Meyer said she did not have flu that year and so she helped those who were sick.

"I went out and worked for the people who did have it," she said.

Mary Brockman said she and her sister were the first ones in her family to get flu.

"We had to go out and do the chores for my father and brother when they were sick. But we had fun, playing around outside. I think my father worried we wouldn't get everything done," she said.

Ida Frank recalled that her entire family was sick during that epidemic.

May Johnson, who was living in Abilene then, remembered, "We all had it. And they died all around us like flies but none of us died."

"But I remember a family that lived beside us. They had four little boys and they all died."

Mrs. Johnson said she has already taken her flu shot.

"With a daughter to ride herd on me, you think I haven't taken it already. I've had two flu shots."

Jimmy Carter is supporting President Ford. West Texas State University's Jimmy Carter, that is. Carter, a student, is from Weatherford, Tex., and is the son of a banker and peanut farmer.

Night of one-acts on CHS stage Monday

Theatre goers will have the opportunity to see three specially prepared one-act plays Monday evening at 7:30 p.m. in Canyon High School auditorium.

Drama veterans of the CHS stage will be performing in the night of one-acts including "The Neighbors," "The Valient" and "The Bald Soprano."

Admission will be 50 cents for the evening of one-acts.

Cast in "The Neighbors" will be Barbara Huber, Molly Blanton, Gina Luquette, Rene West, LaMoyne Davis, Greg Smith and Sharon Lindemann.

Featured in "The Valient" will be Kirk Sparling, Lowell King, Phil Barnes, Keri Hickman and Steve LaGrone.

Appearing in "The Bald Soprano," a surrealistic one-act, will be Bryan Garner, Christy Corley, Patti Guy, J. P. Allen, Royal Brantley and Dinah Winn.

Spook slumber party is held

Gemma Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Johnson, McCormick Road, celebrated her twelfth birthday on Friday, Oct. 22 with a Halloween slumber party.

Gemma and her friends initiated the Johnsons' new playroom addition with games and refreshments — all night long. Everyone also attended "Ghoul School" with lots of frightening screams while learning the parts of a dead man's body.

Guests included Michelle Arnett, Catana Black, Sarah Bush, Kim Forehand, Jeanette Garcia from Canyon; Denise Morgan from Gene Howe and Susie Ovenstone from Amarillo.
